

With the Candidates

The growth and potential of a community is directly related to the development and adherence to a sound master plan, Council Candidate Arthur Kinane said in a statement issued here yesterday.

A few of the issues to be considered to obtain the goal of a sound master plan, Kinane said, include a determination of growth goals, development of zones to implement the growth, provision of educational and recreational facilities for present and future needs, expansion of existing airport potentials, provision of drainage systems wherever applicable, and relief from taxes.

A good balanced community can only result in a tax burden relief which we so desperately need, he said.

Leo Salisbury, Torrance businessman, announced that he will act as chairman of the non-partisan committee to elect David K. Lyman to the Torrance City Council in the election to be held April 10.

Salisbury stated that the present members of the committee are, Gerald L. Alter, R. D. Barkdull, John B. Billings, Neil Campbell, Jerry Dunn, P. J. Fine, Mrs. J. G. Laird, C. Loewenberg, Henry Mahler, Mrs. Hilary Morrow, Haig Marashlian, Mrs. Russell Paxton, Gordon Phillips, Dr. Alfred Redisch, Robert Vroman, Roger West, Robert B. White, Boris S. Wooley and the Rev. Gilbert S. Zimmerman.

Salisbury extended an invitation to all Torrance voters to join the committee. "Lyman is campaigning on a platform designed to benefit those people who are interested in Torrance as a place to live and raise a family and if you desire a man who will represent all the citizens of our community and not just a favored few I ask you to support David K. Lyman," Salisbury said.

Those people interested in further information may contact Salisbury, at 20831 Hawthorne Blvd., Torrance.

An open house for Eva Bisou who is seeking election to the City Council, and Roger (Pat) Hogue, candidate for mayor, has been scheduled for Southwest Park residents at the home of Mrs. John Ernst, 4734 Duna St., Tuesday evening, March 20, beginning at 7:30.

Mrs. Ernst said the open house was one of a series being conducted throughout the Southwest Park area "because we need representation from here on the City Council."

"Having spent more than five years on the Civil Service Commission of the city in direct contact with the various operating departments of the city has allowed me to become acquainted with the problems of many departments, including those of the city clerk's office," Candidate George G. Morehart said yesterday.

"In addition, I am aware of the administrative needs of the city clerk's office to re-establish it as an integrated and functioning department of city government," he said.

"It is my firm intention to devote my full time to this most important elective position if I am elected," he said.

"After a careful review of the qualifications of all Council candidates, I am putting my wholehearted support behind Ken Miller. I feel that he alone is capable of properly representing the people of Torrance."

That statement was issued this week by James Cicchini, Torrance Realtor and candidate for the City Council who last week announced that he was withdrawing from the campaign.

Cicchini is currently vice chairman of the Red Cross drive here, is past secretary of the Torrance Central Little League, and a member of the Rolling Hills Lions Club, Torrance Chamber of Commerce, and Madrona PTA.

Charles Deck, active candidate for election as city clerk in the April 10 municipal election, this week announced the endorsement of the Rev. Orville L. Gardner, pastor of the South Bay Community Church of the Brethren in Redondo Beach and president of the South Bay Ministerial Assn.

In a letter endorsing Deck's election, the Rev. Mr. Gardner said "I would recommend Charles Deck, without reservation, as the most worthy servant of the public interest."

Deck reports that he has organized a team of housewives who are going house to house in his campaign. He pledged that he "will be handling the agenda for the City Council and will alert the homeowners when impending tax raise votes are coming up."

Fred Spangler, candidate for the post of city treasurer, this week announced that he will campaign on a platform of rigid tax economy, efficient operation of the treasurer's office, and development of a program or reinvestment of idle city funds in order to obtain additional funds for community programs.

Spangler, who has a wide background in the field of economics and business administration, was one of the leaders in the programming and financing of the new Temple Menorah, where he served as president of the men's club in 1959, as treasurer in 1960 and as vice-president in 1961.

Long active in civic affairs, he served as director of the city-to-city program and was committee chairman of the Konya-Torrance sister city program.

He toured Turkey as a delegate of the committee and also headed the local organization which greeted Konya city officials when they toured Torrance.

Spangler, his wife, Henny, a daughter, Jane, 18, and a son, Lee, 16, who attends South High, make their home at 5210 Carmen St. in the Southwood area of Torrance.

The 36-year-old candidate is a native of Los Angeles and is a veteran of World War II.

A seven-point program has been outlined by Mrs. Naomi McVey, candidate for election to the Torrance City Council.

If elected, Mrs. McVey said she would promote and support immediate civic auditorium planning; accelerate the program of establishing neighborhood parks, revalue planning for more and improved facilities for police and fire protection and for civil defense, and support a program that citizens play a part in determining the general fiscal policy, planning the budget, and on major projects such as zoning.

Mrs. McVey said also she would encourage establishment of a tax study committee to discover wasteful duplication and overlapping functions.
